Enise Burcu Derinboğaz is the founder of Praxis Landscape. She develops and leads collaborative projects on climate topics, ecological infrastructure, open source geospatial data, landscape and Nature-based Solutions. Trained as a landscape architect in Istanbul, Tokyo and Zurich. She works with governments, municipalities and the private sector worldwide, supporting their strategy on environmental social strategies and planning. She integrates businesses and teams for spatial projects that prioritize social ecological benefits, focuses on how she calls ecological awareness by design. She provides consultancy to climate and nature tech enterprises and startups.

Holding extensive experience on ecological restoration, urban biodiversity strategies, ecological awareness with design, she has managed and implemented complex large scale projects with international multidisciplinary teams. Her works have been widely published and she has been profiled and interviewed on international media.

She serves on architectural competitions as jury member, on IUCN International Union for Conservation of Nature, Education and Communication to support creative communication and education tools to raise awareness and inspire action to conserve nature, on YEYKAD Chamber and TWRE (Turkish Woman of Renewables and Energy) to support and widen the use of renewables, and is a board member of Salon Alper Derinbogaz Architecture, a technology and ecology focused architectural practice based in Berlin, Istanbul, New York and Los Angeles..
